ODDS AND ENDS OF GOSSIP.

IT IS NO MORE.—Jockey avenue that street in our town which has been the scene on County Court day of many gigantic deals in horse flesh, the country horse swapper's rendezvous, the town citizens' horror, is no more. That is, it is to be no more known by its old familiar scenes on County Court day, for the good citizens living in its vicinity did so complain that the town authorities decided to stop what was considered a nuisance, and Marshall Grace took his stand there on last Monday and warned every horse trader to stay off and look out for a less public thoroughfare on which to ply his avocation. There were many loud and long protestations from the members of the craft against what they considered an unjust trampling on their rights by complaining town folks, but they all reluctantly departed to meet at some retired spot.

UP A TREE.—They tell it on a young man about town who frequently visits a beautiful and popular young lady, who lives about three miles from town. It is rather a strange story—if not a joke. It seems that the young man, when he left the parlor and found his Lorse and buggy, which he had left in the yard, was either in a dreamy state of happiness or blind with anger or desperation, at any rate he could not see, although a bright moon was shining, for before getting out of the yard he found himself or rather the buggy literally hung up against a tree. He had tried to drive over a tree three feet in circumference and disaster was the result, and he might have been there yet had it not been for the timely arrival of the young lady's brothers, who, after some hard work, dislodged the young fellow and started him his on the road home.

PLEASANT GROVE.—It was my privilege to visit that delightful neighborhood recently known as the "Grove" or Pleasant Grove. The Grove is not a town, nor a village, nor even a cross-roads, but just a "neighborhood," which includes within a radius of a few miles fifteen or twenty of the prettiest and most prosperous farms to be found in the State, not excepting the famous Bluegrass region. The community is an old settled one, many of the families living on the same farms owned by their fathers and grandfathers. They are clever and hospitable people and live well, and a visitor in their midst will be given a taste of true Kentucky hospitality.

FISHING.—There seems to be quite a fishing craze on about town, especially among the ladies, and several large catches of small fish are reported. Mr. R A. McElroy, who has a fine fish pond has treated some of his friends to a day's fishing, and quite a number of good strings have been brought away. They do say that some days ago, a party of ladies went out to "try for a bite" and were so elated with their success that they paid no attention to a drenching rain which came up, but stood and pulled out the silver side beauties until darkness, when they went home wet but happy in the possession of two hundred fish.

PROGRESSING.—Plans for the putting in of the water works plant are progressing, and Prof. Roberts has completed his map or "profile" of the pipe line as it is to be. He is now engaged in getting estimates on the cost of the pipe and the laying thereof. In his opinion, Prof. Roberts says the entire plant should be put in for $20,000, and probably for $15,000. If the cost does not exceed the latter figure, there is little doubt but that the work will be taken up and put under headway at once.

OUR FAIR.—The Fair Company is already up and doing in the matter of arranging for the meeting in August and prospects are bright for a successful event. The work of getting up the catalogues, which are to be published at the NEWS-LEADER office, has begun, and if the business men and others take the proper interest there is no reason why our next fair not be a success in every respect.

"WITH OUR FARMERS."

Notices stock, seed or grain, wanted or for sale or exchange inserted in this column free of charge. Farmers are requested to send in stock or crop items for publication.

Here comes that Fairfield man in the Spencer Courier again talking about Washington county. He says: "Mr. Elias Wells rented his farm near town to a tobacco man from the hills of Washington county. He once lived on the same farm and is not a very desirable citizen in this community and Mr. Wells has been so notified. While living here the farmers lost many sheep and hogs which they tracked to his house. Turkey and chicken coops were plundered by him; one night while he was in the act of robbing a coop of its fowls, Mr. Joe Bryant let him have the contents of a double-barrel shot gun. Dr. Shadburn extracted ninety bird shot from his carcass. The citizens of this community want no such cattle as him, in fact this rural district is sorely tired of "tobackey" men who have swarmed in here like flies on a July day, and have beat everybody who has had anything to do with them.

Locust posts are becoming so profitable a product of the farm that some farmers with the locust groves on their farms were larger than they now are, while others are contemplating planting their rough or worn out hill sides to the wood, as the tree is not at all particular as to the soil. It is very easily started, all that is necessary is to plant a few inches of root from four to six inches apart and nature will do the rest.—Danville Advocate.

Here's a good horse lie which is going the rounds: A colt born some time ago at Carmel, Miss., was so small as its birth that a man took it up in the palm of his hands and carried it into the house to show to a sick child. Some time after this a woman carried the colt around in her apron. In thrived, despite its smallness, and is now a promising animal.

The enterprising association at Louisville, Ky., has entered the field with a futurity for foals of 1896, to be known as the Kentucky Matron Stake. The total value is $10,000, of which $1,000 is for two-year-olds that pace, $2,000 for two-year-olds that trot, and $7,000 to three-year-olds that trot.

It isn't bein' disappointed in the big things of life which hurts a man the worst. J. W. Givens is back from Lexington, Miss., after a very satisfactory trip. He disposed of 40 mules and horses at $65 to $150. The section is in a very prosperous condition at present, more so than since the war, he thinks.—Interior Journal.

The local horse market continues low. Several good horses were offered on the streets here last Monday but there was poor demand. Mr. S. M. Karrick the liveryman put up six but only one was sold, that one bringing only $40. One good blind roadster was sold on the streets for $4.50.

Mr. L. H. Sea of Seaville, traded two head head of horses to G. W. Barnett for one pair work mules, and one small fancy mare for which Mr. Sea paid fifty five dollars difference. It seems that mule flesh is rapidly going up.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

In response to a call from County Chairman J. L. Wharton, the Republicans of Washington county met in convention at the court house Monday afternoon for the purpose of selecting delegates to the district convention which meets at Hodgenville April 13.

Major Wharton was chosen chairman and J. T. C. Noe secretary of the meeting.

A committee on resolutions was appointed and drafted a set approving the call of the state and district conventions, endorsing the principles of the Republican party favoring tariff reform and the McKinley act. The section endorsing Hon. John W. Lewis was as follows: "That we commend the services of our able representative in Congress the Hon. John W. Lewis, who has proven himself ever alive to the interests of his constituents in the Fourth Congressional district, and that we instruct the delegate of this convention to use all honorable means to secure his nomination at the district convention as our candidate for Congress."

It was also resolved that the convention instruct its delegates to the state convention to cast the vote of Washington county for Col. Jno. B. Carlisle, of Marion county, for Delegate from the 4th Congressional district to the National convention to be held at St. Louis, Mo., 16th day of June, 1896, and use all honorable means to secure his election.

The following resolution endorsing Gov. Bradley's recent action in calling out the malitia, was adopted:

"Whereas, it appears from the statement of almost the entire press of the state, and the evidence of many of the most respectable citizens of all parties, that there was a conspiracy formed by some of the members of the Senate of Kentucky, and the Sergeant-at-arms of said body, with a numger of notorious men sworn in as assistants in violation of the constitution of Kentucky, for the purpose of electing a certain party to the Senate of the United States, or prevent the election of any other parties; and did, in the Senate chamber, assault with force and violence one Senator, and threatened violence to others. We therefore resolve, That the Republicans of Washington county in convention assembled do most unqualifiedly endorse Gov. Bradley's courageous and patriotic course in calling out the malatia thereby preventing riot, violence and bloodshed, which would have inevitably ensued, but for his prompt and decisive action, and all good citizens, regardless of party, in our opinion, should commend him for the preservation of the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth."

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction, City Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos. Rogers, 199 Florida St. San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, sprouchial consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in cough and colds. Free trial bottles at Haydon & Robertson, Druggists.

HARDINS CREEK.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

And still they come—I mean candidates for congress. I did notice they would be so thick so early. Well this is a free for all scuffle, but boys all of you who have the bee about your bonnet or hat, I would say look well to your laurels for I opine that John W. Lewis will make whoever gets his plum pay for it. It is to be hoped that we will not be afflicted with another primary election. They are worse than a scourge of cholera or small pox, for they would put men on their good behavior, but the primary, Good Lord deliver us.

The disgraceful scenes enacted at Frankfort during the late session of the legislature, are the legitimate fruits of trickery and boodle in county politics.

BEECHLAND.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Very extensive preparations are being made throughout this, as well as other sections of the country, for quite an extensive tobacco crop. While the perceptible decline in the markets and the crops continual increase, it is a self evident fact that the industry will in the near future cease to be one of profit. In the exigency of which, who will suggest the remedy? It is a notice able fact among the people of the present age, that when some shall have engaged in a certain industry and it has proven profitable, for all others to engage in the same. It does seem that if we could have a greater variety of crops, all might prove more profitable. Our county is well adapted to the cultivation and growth of hemp, broomcorn, and many other products of the soil, and some of our enterprising young men have suggested the cultivation of "heartichokes."

The dwelling house of Sam F. Turner, known as the Mitchell Home, about one mile North of this place, was completely destroyed by fire Sunday night about 10 o'clock. We do not know the amount of insurance. The house was occupied by a tenant, who sustained some loss of furniture, etc.

Charlie Noe and family of your town visited relatives at this place Sunday.

Henry Peterson has returned from New York city, and Jacob Peterson from Chicago, where they have been with a car load of poultry.

Our community was greatly shocked on last Friday about noon Eddie Goode and his brother Clarence were out hunting, and in getting over the fence, Eddie's gun was discharged and the whole load entering the right thigh, cutting arteries, etc. He live so freely before medical aid could be had that the doctors in attendance could not save his life. The physicians in attendance were Debo, Mayfield and Lampton. Eddie lingered until about 5 o'clock of the same day, then quietly and peacefully fell to sleep. The relatives and friends attended closely. His father and sister Miss Dora, were in Evergreen, Ala., but were dispatched for immediately and returned home about 2 o'clock on Sunday. Eddie was the third child of George S. Goode and wife; bright, intelligent, and a favorite with all. Bro. R. L. AN INDUSTRIAL EDITION.

We have made arrangements to publish within a few weeks a special illustrated and industrial edition of the NEWS-LEADER which will be devoted exclusively to the interests of Washington county. In that enterprise, we have been quite fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Sam Carpenter Elliott, the well known Historical and Industrial writer, to write a history of Washington county from 1792 to the present time. Sketches of prominent men, colleges, churches, business firms, and our beautiful girls will appear printed on fine paper from half-tone cuts. Washington county is one of the best in Kentucky, and we propose to show it by getting out a big industrial and historical number. We ask the assistance of everybody in this great undertaking.

Senator Mills introduced a resolution in the Senate that will find an endorsement from many friends of freedom throughout the country. The resolution favored the seizing of the island of Cuba by the United States in case the Spanish Government shall refuse to grant self government to the Cubans. Mr. Mills spoke eloquently in advocacy of his resolution and said that the Monroe doctrine, was as old as humanity and God almighty was its author, for when he made man he placed in him the right to preserve his life and liberty.

THE McKinley boom is on and is gaining strength. His workers are out and seem to be hard at it even here in Kentucky where they are evidently trying to work up antagonism to Bradley. Should Gov. Wm. O., however, ever seriously get into the race for President, it is safe to say that he would carry at least all of those faithful who elected him Governor of their Common wealth.

Gov. Bradley has gone to Parkersburg W Va. to speak before the State League of Clubs and also so it is whispered to talk big political talk with Steve Elkins.

Look Out For Them.

Now is the time that colts should be examined closely and often for lice by somebody with sharp eyes. These vermin are generally located most plentifully on the sides of the neck in the roots of the mane and around the withers. Some varieties are so very small and so nearly white that unless inspected closely they are liable to be mistaken for small specks of dandruff. Insect powder applied freely and thoroughly rubbed in is about the cheapest and safest remedy for them bloodthirsty little pests in cold weather. Washing in a strong decoction of quassia chips is sure to kill the vermin, but the trouble is the remedy applied in cold weather is liable to kill the colts, too, unless they are taken to an artificially heated room and thoroughly dried after being washed.

Tobacco smoke applied with an instrument made for the purpose and attached to a hand bellows is the most effective remedy in the hands of an expert, and is the most easily and quickly applied after one learns the knack of handling the instrument.—American Horse Breeder.

Told For a True Story.

The other day an elderly lady with an umbrella stood on the sidewalk on Washington street, vainly trying to stop a south bound car. A white car came along, and the woman brandished her umbrella and called out:

"Here! Stop! You stop!"

The motorman slowed up a little and called out:

"We can't carry you—this is a mail car."

"Well," screamed the old lady from the pavement, "can't a female ride on it?"—Boston Transcript.

ICE CAVES OF JAPAN.

Located In Lava Beds, They Present a Beautiful Appearance.

Some eight or nine miles from Shoji, in the woods, is the entrance to the great ice cave we had come so far to see, a natural circular depression or basin in the ground in the middle of the forest, some 30 yards across and about 40 feet deep. At the foot of one of the sides is a dark opening in the lava, a few feet down which may be seen the top of a wooden ladder. This is about 20 feet long, and at the foot of it are a heap of blocks of lava, down which we scrambled for some 30 or 40 feet more, till a floor of solid ice more or less flat was reached. Very careful progress along this had to be made to avoid slipping down and extinguishing the torches. For the first 30 yards frequent blocks of lava rise through the ice of the floor, while farther on there is nothing but ice. The lava roof is sometimes 20 or 40 feet above one's head, sometimes only 4 or 5 feet from the floor. The light of the torches glanced continually on icicles many feet long pendant from the roof. Presently we passed some large blocks of ice, which had been cut by the country people for sale at Kofu, some miles off. At nearly 400 yards from the entrance about 20 wonderful ice stalagmites, from 2 to 5 feet in height, rose from the floor close to a lava wall forming apparently the end of the cave, to meet icicles hanging from the roof, from which water at this time of the year continually drops on to them. In some of these stalagmites form hollow bell shaped cylinders, giving out a faint note like a gong when struck. They are partly filled with the water which drips on to them from the icicles above.

Soon by the side of them, on the left, a low arch in the lava on the level of the floor about 3 feet high may be seen. Down this is a strong current of air, there is a rapid descent for some 35 feet, and thence the course of the cave has been followed for another 200 yards or so; but, owing to the strong current of air which constantly extinguishes the torches, and the smallness of the passage, which slopes down rapidly from the entrance, no detailed description of it can be given, but undoubtedly the cave runs on for some distance, perhaps to another outlet, for the current of air is very strong at the extreme point to which any one has yet penetrated.

The ice has probably remained frozen in the cave from the winter months, the action of the higher summer temperature being insufficient to do more than affect the surface of the ice floor, form a few pools of water and melt part of the ice stalactites and stalagmites. The temperature of the cave in summer seldom exceeds 35 degrees F., and that in the declivity or basin in the ground at the entrance some 10 degrees or 12 degrees higher. On going up from the latter to the level of the ground in the wood a rise of some 20 degrees on a warm day is at once experienced.

Here we staid the night at the town of Kajika-zawa and next day made the exciting descent of the rapids of the Kujikawa, which need no description here, as an excellent one is given by Messrs. Chamberlain & Mason in their guide, referred to above. At Ivabuchi, 45 miles from Kajika-zawa, reached in a little over six hours, I entered the train for Kioto, in which I spent a most wretched night, in company with a number of mosquitoes, whose powers of penetration I believe are unequaled elsewhere, clothes forming no protection whatever—a somewhat unpleasant termination to an enjoyable trip.—London Field.

A Kentuckian's Idea of Heaven.

Captain George Ewing of Bath county, Ky., was a gallant officer in the Confederate army, and he is now at home on his big blue grass farm, fat, hale and hearty, and he still rides a horse with the ease of a Comanche.

Talking to some friends last summer at Olympian Springs about heaven he said:

"My idea of heaven is to meet the boys I went a-fishin with and the girls we used to serenade. I want to talk hoss with Bill Botts and hear Sam Wright tell about how many wild turkeys he shot with one bullet. I would like to hear old Colonel Murray brag on his stock of hogs, and hear Dick Costigan tell what a smart dog his Tige was. I don't care nuthin 'tall about settin round in golden chairs and playin on harps. I never could even as much as play on a jew's harp. And, say, wouldn't I look nice flyin around with a lot of strange angels?"—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Fool Who Knew Latin.

It was a mediæval saying that a fool is never a complete fool unless he knows Latin. This may also be said of the pedant, the man who is educated beyond his capacity, and hence the knowledge that he cannot assimilate is an incumbrance, in attempting to use which he only makes himself ridiculous.—Notes and Queries.

The mind is found most acute and most uneasy in the morning. Uneasiness is, indeed, a species of sagacity—a passive sagacity. Fools are never uneasy.—Goethe.

Hamlet and Hysteria.

Hamlet learns from Horatio and his companions of the apparition of his father's spirit. His prophetic soul already presages foul play, and through the darkness of his suspicions now rises the blood red sun of revenge. Up to this point Hamlet has been a perfectly sane and rational young man. In the meeting with the ghost, again, there is nothing abnormal in his attitude—he is overcome with awe on beholding his father's spirit in arms, and is prepared to follow him regardless of perils. In the second ghost scene Hamlet is overwhelmed with grief and indignation on learning of the infamy, by which his father met his death. To the actor this is a scene of intense and prolonged excitement, more exhausting, because pent up, than perhaps any other passage in the whole play.

I have sometimes asked myself, with that second consciousness of the actor, whether thus to waste one's vital force could have any compensating effect upon the audience, for Hamlet's eyes refused on the ghost, his face is averted from the public, and probably the actor's excitement is lost upon them, but nevertheless considers that it is necessary for the actor to undergo this strain of self exhaustion in order to reach that condition of hysteria which overcomes Hamlet after the ghost's departure. Here, again, Hamlet, it seems to me, behaves just as any highly wrought young man would behave on hearing of the terrible fate which had befallen a beloved father. He is all on fire to sweep to his revenge with wings as swift as meditation or the thoughts of love. But the fire is too fierce—it perforce burns itself out. And here the actor should make clear to the audience that physical exhaustion prevents Hamlet from carrying out the impulse of his mind—the weakened physical machine is, as it were unequal to respond to the promptings of the mind.—Beerbohm Tree in Fortnightly Review.

The Bloomfield people it seems are to have another respite before their railroad is taken away. The Shelby Sentinel says. "On April 1st the contract between the Receiver of the Northern Division of Cumberland & Ohio and the L. & N. R. R. Co. will expire. Pending the action of the Court of Appeals, Mr. Middleton, the Receiver, expects to extend the contract under the provisions now existing for thirty or sixty days. The report submitted by the L. & N. Co. shows that the receipts have exceeded the expenditures since the road passed into the hands of a Receiver."

The resources of old Washington are not all developed yet by a large majority, and there are signs of an oil boom up in the Mackville district. A special from Lexington says: "Major T. B. Hoover, an old oil man, has just returned from Mercer and Washington counties, where oil was discovered last week. He is very enthusiastic over the prospect of oil development there, so much so that he purchased a third interest in 5,000 acres of land around Mackville, Washington county and will organize a company at once to develop it. He says the territory is not altogether new. In 1863 prospectors from Pennsylvania struck oil near Perryville, but they went away with the Union army and were never heard of again. Samples procured by Major Hoover show it to be a fine quality of lubricating oil."

Extravagant Young Britons.

My! What some of those young men spend on their clothes! You would open your eyes if you saw some of the things got ready for them! Fancy a pink silk nightshirt, with roses embroidered on the chest. Others have openworked fronts, and one that ma and I saw was trimmed with lace on which forget-me-nots were embroidered. Lace fronts to evening socks are another item. Such extravagance as they indulge in must make them conceited creatures. There's my young man. Ma and I and Emmie and Susie went for 5 o'clock tea to his rooms the other day, and when we went into his sleeping room to settle our hats and wash our hands we found the dressing table a mass of gold and silver and turquoise. He had his monogram in diamonds on the tortoise shell backs of his brushes. A gold box of lovely workmanship held his rings, and a perfectly exquisite old carved ivory casket was hung on the wall for a medicine chest. I'm afraid I shall have some trouble in breaking that young man in. He has spoiled himself, and the snapping part of it is that he has given himself many handsomer things than he has ever given me. It will take me years to make him see things in a proper light.—London Truth.

The Turkish Way.

The late M. Carnot, president of the French republic, died from a stroke of apoplexy! Nobody ever heard of that among the subjects of the sultan and this is explained as follows in La Jeune Turquie, a bimonthly periodical printed in Paris by the Young or Liberal Turks: "Everybody has known the criminal attempt which cut off the life of M. Carnot. But as soon as the news reached Constantinople the papers were ordered not to mention it. Still, as the sultan was made to understand that it was impossible to conceal a fact like that of the death of the regretted president of the French republic, Abdul Hamid, answered, 'Let them say that he died from apoplexy.' He feared that the event might suggest to one of his subjects the idea of imitating Caserio."

An Eyeless Eden.

The little hamlet of Alliceton, Jefferson county, Wis., enjoys the distinction of being the only Wisconsin settlement of any size without a woman resident or inhabitant.

The village was platted a year ago, immediately settled and named after Alice Aspinwall Metcalf, daughter of J. A. Aspinwall, one of the very first settlers of the county. At present it has a "star route" mail service daily, a dry goods and grocery store, butter and cheese factory, blacksmith and repairing shop and a resident population of perhaps a hundred men. It is known as "the town without a woman."—Chicago Tribune.

The Ancient Incas.

The flocks of llamas belonged to the sun and the inca. It was death to kill one. At certain seasons of the year they were collected from the hills and shorn. Large numbers were sent to supply food for the court and to be used at the religious festivals and sacrifices. Male llamas only were killed. The wool belonged to the inca, and was stored in the government depositories, and deals out according as the people's wants required. In this way they were provided with warm clothing. When they had worked up enough wool into clothing for themselves, they were then employed in working up material for the inca. The distribution of the wool and superintendence of its manufacture were in the hands of officers picked out for the purpose. No one was allowed to be idle. Idleness was a crime and was severely punished.

All the mines belonged to the inca, and were worked for his benefit. The various employments were usually in the hands of a few, and became hereditary; what the father was, that the son became. A great part of the agricultural products was stored in granaries scattered up and down the country, and was dealt out to the people as required. It will thus be seen that there was no chance for a man to become rich, neither could he become poor. The spirit of speculation had no existence there.—Chambers' Journal.

Nestl's Laxative is not a cure all. If you break your leg Nestl's Laxative will not put it together again, but if you are broke in health and pocket, for it not much to pay for a bottle of Nestl's Laxative, which never fails to cure constipation and kindred ailments.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

COLORS FOR FARM BUILDINGS.

Avoid Characteristics Catering — Employ Strong Contrasting Colors—A Few Rules.

In painting house or barn, take into account natural environment. Surrounded by trees and shrubbery, the building should be in light colors, as these afford the best contrast with the setting of trees, etc., and look better at a distance. Where the building stands in the open, more subdued coloring may be employed. The reasons for these rules must be obvious. The buildings are required to sustain color relations with the surrounding country, explains a correspondent of The Country Gentlemen, and authority for the following, in the absence of a knowledge of color, a good color perception is useful, but few possess this gift. Hence a few general rules may not be amiss.

Avoid pale characterless coloring. Employ strong, rich, contrasting colors. A safe rule is to use shades of one color—say the body is drab, then add more umber and some lampblack and a bit of red to make trim color. Lighten body color for slats of blinds and slightly darken it for panels of shutters and doors. Use trim color for stiles and rails (framework) of blinds and shutters and doors, as well as for cornice, corner-pieces, etc. That would be what we call color harmony by analogy. By contrast is when we use positive colors, such as red beside, say, green. Snubbe done in red, look well with almost any color scheme. Venetian and Indian reds, mixed half and half, give a nice sash red and Tuscan red, a darker sort, is a general favorite. The most beautiful red is one used by the carriago painter and known usually as aurora lake. It pains $1 a pound, though half a pound would do the windows of an average house. Tuscan red gives a good color for blinds, and, like all iron base colors, is quite durable. Blinds are usually difficult to paint a suitable color.

Cold colors are hardly ever as well adapted to surroundings as the warmer colors. And yet cool colors look well in conjunction with other colors in masses. Take a cottage that has natural (structural) divisions. The first story, unless of stone or brick, may be in Tuscan red, the next a leadish gray and the gables a warm yellow. Nothing is prettier than a cottage structure thus painted, and the gray is the most pleasing color of the lot, though passed by itself it proves cold and repellant. Buildings that have no such structural divisions must be painted in one color from bottom to top, excepting of course the trim.

Groups of buildings should be of one color scheme. If the dwelling is in colonial yellow and white, then the barn may be in ocher color and white. The barn, being in the open, must be more subdued in color than the tree surrounded house. If the house is in rather subdued coloring, then the barn may be in iron oxide brown.

High buildings look best with dark roofs; ditto massive buildings. Low buildings look best with light colored roofs. As a rule, the roof sustains no color relation with the rest of the structure, but a dark roof implies heaviness and a light color the contrary; hence the rule above given.

Rolling Soil For Seeding.

To the query, Is it an advantage to roll the soil after seeding? Prairie Farmer replies:

This depends much on the nature of the soil and climate and on the crop seeded. In very many cases rolling the soil after corn has been planted is a decided advantage, especially if the ground is cloddy. On the other hand, rolling after wheat has been drilled in is not only uncommon, but would rarely be advisable. Where grass or clover seed is sown in the spring on land which was sown to wheat or other fall small grain, rolling is often advisable, if the ground is dry enough. Clay soils may be helped by rolling in many cases, or greatly injured if rolled when wet. In the observation of the writer the use of the roller is not increasing in the central western states, various "drags" or "smoothing" implements being substituted for it. Where grass or clover has been injured but not destroyed by "heaving" in the winter, rolling in the spring is often helpful. Assuming that reference is made to seeding with small grain or grass, the probabilities are that rolling before would be preferable to rolling after the seeding had been done.

SOUTH CAROLINA HOG CONTEST.

Winners of Prizes Offered by the Charleston News and Courier.

The News and Courier this year renews the premium offers of last year for the biggest and best hogs raised in the state at the least expense. It adds besides this year a prize for the best sugar cured hams raised and cured in the state. This is done with the patriotic motive of encouraging southern farmers to raise their own pork. Other states will do well to follow such an example and for other than swine products. Rich men of any state could do much to develop not only the live stock, but the fruit, poultry, bee and other interests by giving prizes for the best productions in any of the lines named.

The record made by the principal competitors for The News and Courier's prizes was interesting and instructive. Three premiums were awarded, $60 in gold for the best hog raised in South Carolina in 1895, $20 in gold for the second best and a set of the American Encyclopedia for the third best. The first and second prizes were won as follows:

The first prize, "for the heaviest hog," was won by Mr. W. J. Richardson, a youth of Abbeville county, for a hog which gained 691 pounds in 397 days, at a cost of $32.10, or at the rate of 1.99 pounds per day, at the cost of 4.71 cents per pound.

The second prize, "for the next heaviest hog," was won by Mr. J. M. Leech of York county, for a hog which gained 839 pounds in 373 days, at a cost of 16.05, or at the rate of 1.93 pounds a day, at the cost of 3.14 cents a pound.

Young Richardson makes the following statement as to the way in which his first prize hog was reared and fed. The contest began Feb. 20, 1895, and ended Dec. 17:

"My prize pig was born on 23d February, 1895, from a Berkshire sow by a Poland-China boar, and cost very little up to 17th April thereafter; estimated cost up to that time, $1.35. I now fenced in one-quarter of an acre in a cool, shady place, with running water to pass through. I started with two pigs, castrated, and put them in this pen, commenced feeding on slops made of corn meal, bran and milk. The preparation was changed occasionally by mixing one time with milk, fresh from the churn, at another with sour buttermilk, and at another with scalded hot water, adding after 10th June peaches, and after the 12th of July apples, sweet potatoes and melons. This feed was given up to 17th September. I then selected the best pig, put him in a closely made floored pen, made with a fence low as to turn him in and out easily on account of hot weather and to allow him the run of a cedar pasture. The feed from now until 17th December was cornmeal and cane seed meal in equal parts, cooked, mixed with buttermilk and soured and Spanish pindars. I attended closely and with regularity to feeding three times a day, giving salt and charcoal and ash and every thing which I thought would make the best results."

SUPPLEMENTAL IRRIGATION.

It Appears to Be a Necessity For Some of the Most Fertile States.

The drought of last season and its disastrous effects for the farmers of the central western states, together with the reports of successful results on an irrigated farm near Kankakee, Ills., have combined to create a widespread interest among farm owners and farm workers. As reported upon by The Irrigation Age, the irrigated farm alluded to made a practical gain of $130 per acre for the small outlay for the irrigating plant. When asked for his opinion as to the future of irrigation, Superintendent Gapen, who suggested and assisted in carrying out the innovation, is reported as saying:

"I believe there will be a larger number of farms irrigated east of the one hundredth meridian than west of it. I see no reason why farmers should stridily by and see their crops ruined by droughts. In this climate I should say that two irrigations during the season would be necessary, though, of course, this would depend on the amount of rain. I call my system 'supplemental irrigation,' as it is intended to supplement the rainfall. Almost any farmer who possesses a well or spring can, for a small cost, comparatively, insure his crops against a dry season. Water will run down hill, and the chief thing to take into consideration is to get the water to the highest point on the land. I estimate the entire cost of a plant—engine, mains, hydrants, etc.—to be about $15 to $20 per acre irrigated. This is the first year's expenditure. After that the expense would be only for fuel and labor. I believe the increase in crops the first season would more than repay the entire cost of the plant. It would be possible in some cases to use windmills for pumping, but small steam of oil engines are not expensive."

The superintendent believes that within a few years every farmer will have an irrigation system, or will irrigate his orchards and gardens from wells. In many places a few farmers can join together and take water out of a stream, as was formerly done in Utah and other sections of the arid region. He also predicts such a demand for cheap pumping plants, able to deliver water at a relatively small cost, that it will lead some inventive genius to make a pump at far less cost than anything on the market at the present time. He would not advise any farmer, however, to wait for cheaper machinery, as the value of one crop, lost for the want of irrigation, will more than pay the cost of pumps and windmills at the price they are now sold. Asked what would be a fair statement of the increase in the value of farm land on account of the irrigation system, Superintendent Gapen replied that the increase in products is fearful, and, estimating on this basis, land which was valued at $100 an acre without irrigation would be worth $500 an acre with it.

INDIAN PLEASANTRIES.

How a Single Piegan Passed For Seventy and a Roo Fooled a Trader.

"A member of the Canadian mounted police, Lieutenant McDonough, told me," said Captain Partello, at the Officers' club, "the following incident of a band of Crees and a solitary Piegan Indian, which is novel and interesting. It occurred about 100 miles from Fort Walsh. A band of Cree Indians woke up one snowy morning to find that about one dozen of their choicest ponies had been run off during the night. Pursuit was soon organized, and within a few hours a fresh trail was found in the snow. After following the trail some 30 miles it entered a river bottom and headed for a wooded island in the middle of the river.

"Smoke was seen rising from the trees, and an opening, which seemed to be the mouth of a cave, appeared in plain view. Presently a single Indian, a Piegan, showed up in front of the opening. He was in war paint, and there was a dog at his heels. Pretty soon the dog scented the Crees and began growling and barking. The Piegan looked up, glanced a moment about him and then instantly entered the cave. In about ten seconds another Piegan came around the rocks and also went in, then another and another and another, there being but a few seconds between them. The Crees lay silently in the bushes, watching and counting, until upward of 50 Piegans had come around the rocks and gone into the cave, and still they kept coming. What seemed remarkable was the fact that all these Indians were, to all appearances, exactly the same size, were dressed and painted alike, each carried a rifle, and, most remarkable, each seemed a little lame in the left foot, limping slightly.

"They were a gaudy crowd, and the Crees counted 70 of them. The superstitious Crees naturally concluded that the evil spirit had something to do with it, for there was no doubt that there were 70 Piegan Indians on the island who were exactly alike.

"So thoroughly were they filled with the idea that the devil was mixed up with the mystery that even when the re-enforcements arrived, which was in a few hours, they were reluctant to attack the island. That night one Cree, less superstitious than the rest, crossed over the ice to investigate. On approaching the supposed cave he was surprised to find it was no cave at all, but simply an opening leading some ten feet into the rock, where it made a turn and came out on the other side. It required but a glance to understand what had seemed so mysterious before. There was but the remnant of a single campfire, the ponies were gone, and not an Indian was in sight. The apparent presence of 69 other warriors was a sharp trick on the part of the Piegan warrior to deceive his enemies and gain time for his escape, which he accomplished in good shape.

"While it is true that most red men are ridiculously superstitious, and others again so stolid and indifferent that you might enter their presence with a brass band, throw handsprings before them, smile, weep, have convulsions or do some other outrageous thing and yet they will sit and look at you with a cold, reserved glance and disinterested eye, still there are more who have the bump of humor pretty well developed and are intense wags in their own way. The trader at Fort Benthold, on the upper Missouri, caught a Tartar one day.

A Roo Indian had given him considerable annoyance by hanging around the store in a half drunken condition, and was told that in case he was seen again with a bottle it would be taken away from him and thrown into the fire. A few days afterward the Indian appeared with a pint flask in his blanket, as usual. The trader was as good as his word, and demanded the bottle, which was given up without a word of protest, and then the redskin started for the door. The trader threw the flask into the stove, when, bang! went the stove and out came the windows, the trader following. Had he stopped to investigate before throwing, he would have found the flask contained gunpowder, not whisky.—Buffalo Express.

CANCER CURED
LIFE SAVED
By the Persistent Use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. Since then, I use Ayer's Sarsaparilla occasionally as a tonic and blood-purifier, and, indeed, it seems as though I could not keep house without it."—Mrs. S. A. Fields, Bloomfield, Ia.

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Parkhurst, Sheldon's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many scented Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. Thus it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a crime punishable by fine?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this protection to Castoria was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when purchased of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.
